

By placing a swimming pool at the centre of the home — integrating living and dining areas within this shared leisure space — the boundaries between domestic life and recreation are redefined. Bedrooms remain the only semi-private areas, challenging conventional separations between leisure and domesticity.